Bristol

Everyman Bristol was built in 1920–1921 by James Henry Latrobe and Thomas Harry Weston (1870–1923) and opened by the Duchess of Beaufort on 29 November 1921. It formerly had a ballroom, billiard room and restaurant but in 1978, the large single screen was removed and the building split into three screens.

Formerly White Ladies Picture House this stunning Grade II listed venue has been lovingly restored and has kept many of the beautiful building's original Art Deco features, the cinema really is something to behold and is the perfect setting for film premieres, private screenings and corporate away days. It has been a hugely popular venue since it first re-opened its doors in 2016 and has hosted events with the BBC, Netflix, Wild Screen Festival and Social Media week.

All of our screens are equipped with either Sony 4K digital or NEC cinema projectors, Dolby Digital Audio, HD Satellite possibility, conference facilities & IR system for audio description and hearing assist.
